CIVIL ACTION FILE
NO. 1:11-cv-04139-WSD

PLAINTIFF'S RESPONSE TO DEFENDANTS'
MOTION TO STRIKE

COMES NOW, Plaintiff Vito J. Fenello Jr, and hereby files this RESPONSE to Defendants' Motion to Strike Plaintiffs' Second Response in Opposition to Defendants' Motion to Dismiss filed by Defendants on January 26, 2012 [Doc. 19] (hereinafter, "Motion to Strike").

Defendants allege in their Motion to Strike that the Plaintiffs Second Response is "procedurally improper" and "without merit." They further argue that allowing “surreplies as a regular practice would put the court in the position of refereeing an endless volley of briefs.”

RESPONSE

Plaintiffs counter that their Second Response was within the 14 day time limit specified under Rule 12 of Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, as well as the extended response period that resulted from the Defendants’ own Motion to Stay Pretrial Deadlines (see Order granted by this court, Doc 14, which extended the comment period to January 12, as evidenced in the PACER system (Exhibit 21).

Given these deadlines, there is no threat of an “endless volley of briefs” as alleged by the Defendants.

Further, Plaintiffs’ counter that their Second Response, rather than being without merit, builds on the positions outlined in the Complaint and their First Response, and counters the Defendants’ repeated attempts to distract this court away from the big question: “Can Bank of America foreclose on a homeowner, without showing any evidence that their client actually owns the promissory note?”

Plaintiffs’ Complaint lays out the tortuous actions of the Defendants, their First Response flushes out the case law that supports their position, and the Second response shows current rulings and other actions supporting the Plaintiffs’ case.

CONCLUSION

Should this Court choose to strictly enforce rules of surreplies, then the Defendants' own REPLY IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO DISMISS (Doc 16) would also qualify as a surreply, and should be stricken as well. Further, if the court decides to strictly enforce these rules, it should also enforce the STANDING ORDER REGARDING CIVIL LITIGATION as issued by the Honorable Judge William S. Duffey, Jr., and disallow the Defendant's Motion to Dismiss for exceeding page limitations without prior court approval (Doc 11).

WHEREFORE, for the above and foregoing reasons, the Defendants' Motion to Strike should therefore be denied.

Respectfully submitted,

Vito J. Fenello, Jr.
